C., Near East civilizations (particularly those in the area known as "Turkey" or "Anatolia") were dominated by the Hittite, or

Hittian, people, who were related to the Amorites, Pahlevans, and Phrygians, the Assyrians and Babylonians, the Phoenicians, and the Egyptians. The Hittites were a center of the Bronze Age, and civilization in their time was as advanced as that of the Egyptians during the same period of Egyptian history. During much of their history, the Hittites were in a position of relative independence, having managed to remain outside the dominance of their great eastern enemies. Their culture and language, although very different, resembled that of the neighboring peoples. The language is called Hittite, 595f342e71
